

My Vote My Power

There is no denying the fact that my vote is the power by which, I create my own future. If I vote recklessly, I will have a dark future; however if I vote wisely, it will bring light not only for me, but for all.

Fortunate are people who live in democracies. Our ancestors won this privilege with many sacrifices. India too is the largest democracy in the world. What makes democracy really successful is the enfranchisement (right to vote).

The right to vote gives the people of a country to get rid of all the ills that their country might be facing. If the Government is not administering the nation honestly and progressively, the people can change that government by using their right to vote.

In India people changed governments in states and at the Centre whenever any elected Government did not come up to people's expectations.

However, in certain cases, people don't use their right to vote righteously and wisely. They just misuse this power. We should always use our right to vote for the welfare of all and for justice and promoting democratic values.

We should never ever not waste our right to vote by opting not to vote. We should always vote to the right leader, political party by rising above the narrow ideologies of caste, color, creed and religion.
