

POWER OF WOMEN

Women have found power in a variety of ways through and history equality. Though personal power can take many forms this paper will primarily focus on power found through gender solidarity, class issues race or sexuality. I intended to examine the ways in which three different women, of different races and times in history, were able to find such power resulting in a positive change to either their own lives or the lives of others. Those women are: Elizabeth lady Stanton, Eleanor Roosevelt and Melba Beal's.

Elizabeth Lady Stanton found power through gender solidarity. She was a true feminist concerned with not just suffrage, but total equality for the sexes. Her Declaration of Sentiments brilliantly...show more content Roosevelt spoke out for an abundance of causes including women's rights, poverty, discrimination, children's issues and foreign affairs. Being the President's wife came with certain privileges and she utilized them on several occasions to further her agendas.
