

TODAY'S YOUTH

Introduction

The youth are the backbone of a country's progress and development. Youth are the key to the future. As one of the most vibrant segments of the country, there is great potential for them to contribute to the development of the nation.

The youth of today

The human civilization is a product of centuries of evaluation. Every generation contributes to the development of society with its own set of ideas and opinions. Despite its potential, youth today can also be seen as impatient and impulsive. Today's youth are eager to learn and explore new things. Although they may seek the counsel of their elders from time to time, they don't want to follow their wisdom on every energy step.

There is more violence than ever in the world today, and a large part of it is due to youth.

1. Lack of education
2. Unemployment
3. Power play
4. General dissatisfaction with life
5. Growing competition

These are some of the reasons the younger generation commits crime.

Mobile phones and social media have become so ingrained in the lives of today's youth that they have forgotten that there is a world outside of them. As a result, today's youth are self-obsessed and want to showcase everything they do on social media.

The lifestyle of the modern youth has been restructured with the development of technologies such as cell phones and social networking websites, as well as various gadgets and technologically advanced equipment. Young people prefer to workout at the gym rather than go for a brisk walk in the morning.

In a similar vein, while earlier people used to walk miles to reach their school and workplace, the youth of today prefer to drive, even if it is a short distance. We are using elevators instead of stairs, cooking food in microwaves and air fryers instead of stovetops, and preferring malls to parks. The youth are losing touch with nature thanks to technology.

Conclusion

In order for their children to become good human beings, parents must nurture them. In addition to teachers, youth also benefit from all that they learn at school. They need to take their responsibilities seriously. Despite the importance of not being bound by superstition, we should instill the good that our culture has to offer. Similarly, one must use technology to improve their lives. It is not ours to be its slave.

M. Cruz Deepa

- 22BM06